Your only wearing is your grogeram. Donne.
Natolia affords great store of chamelots and grograms. Sandys.
Some men will say this habit of John's was neither of camel's skin nor any coarse texture of its hair, but rather some finer weave of camelot, grogram, or the like. Brown's Vul. Err.
The natural sweetness and innocence of her behaviour shot me through and through, and did more execution upon me in grogram than the greatest beauty in town had ever done in brocade. Addison's Spectator.

Plain goody would no longer down;
'Twas madam in her grogram gown. Swift.
GROIN. n. f. [Of uncertain derivation.] The part next the thigh.

The fatal dart arrives,
And through the border of his buckler drives;
Pierc'd through and pierc'd his groin; the deadly wound
Cast from his chariot, roll'd him on the ground. Dryden.
GRO'WELL. n. f. [litseperrum, Latin.] Gromill or gray-mill. A plant.

The cup of the flower consists of one leaf, cut into five long narrow segments: the flower, which is, for the most part, small, consists of one leaf, is funnel-shaped, and open at the top: the point is uncompassed by four embryo's, which become so many roundish hard polished seeds. Miller.

Fell not from heaven, or more gross to love
Vice for itself. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.

Is not religion so perfectly good in itself, above all, in its Author, that, without the gross sensuality, we cannot but admire it. Spratt's Sermons.

It is a gross mistake of some men, to think that our wants only and imperfections do naturally induce us to be beneficient. Smalridge's Sermons.

4. Inelegant; disproportionate in bulk.
The sun's oppressive ray the roseat bloom
Of beauty blasting, gives the gloomy hue,
And feature gross. Thomson's Summer.

5. Thick; not refined; not pure.
It is manifest, that when the eye standeth in the finer medium, and the object is in the gross, things shew greater;
but contrariwise, when the eye is placed in the gross medium, and the object in the finer. Bacon's Natural History.

The gross feeds the purer; earth the sea,
Earth and the sea feed air. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. v.

And in clear dream and solemn vision,
Tell her of things that no gross ear can hear. Milton.

Some men give more light and knowledge by the bare flaring of the question with periphrasy and justness, than others by talking of it in gross confusion for whole hours together. Watson.

7. Coarse; rough; opposite to delicate.
Fine and delicate sculptures are helped with nearness, and gross with distance. Watson's Architecture.

8. Thick; fat; bulky.
GROSS. n. f. [from the adjective.]
1. The main body; the main force.

The Belgians hop'd, that with disorder'd haste
The deep-cut keels upon the sands might run;
Or, if with caution leisurely were past,
Their numerous gross might charge us one by one. Dryden.

Several casuists are of opinion, that, in a battle, you should discharge upon the gross of the enemy, without levelling your piece at any particular person. Addison's Freeholder.

The gross of the people can have no other prospect in changes and revolutions than of publick blessings. Addison.

2. The bulk; the whole not divided into its several parts.
Certain general inducements are used to make saleable your cause in gross. Hooker, Preface.

There was an opinion in gross, that the soul was immortal. Abbot's Description of the World.

Remember, son,
You are a general: other wars require you;
For see the Saxon gross begins to move. Dryden's R. Arthur.

Notwithstanding the decay and loss of sundry trades and manufactures, yet, in the gross, we ship off now one third part more of the manufactures, as also lead and tin, than we did twenty years past. Child's Discourse on Trade.

3. Not individual, but a body together.
He hath ribbons of all the colours 't' th' rainbow; they come to him by the gross. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

and repetitions of this kind, joined together, make those distinct simple modes of a dozen, a gross, and a million. Locke.

GROSSLY. adv. [from gross.]
1. Bulkily; in bulky parts; coarsely: as, this matter is grossly pulverized. Hooker, b. iv. f. 12.

2. Without subtilty; without art; without delicacy; without refinement; coarsely; palpably.

Such kind of ceremonies as have been so grossly and shamefully abused in the church of Rome, where they remain, are scandalous. Hooker, b. iv. f. 12.

Treason and murder ever kept together,
As two yoke devils sworn to others purpose;
Working so grossly in a natural cause,
That admiration did not whoop at them. Shakespeare Hen. V.

And thine eyes
See it so grossly shown in thy behaviour,
That in their kind they speak it. Shakespeare.

What! are we cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it?
—Speak not so grossly. Shakespeare Merchant of Venice.

What I have said has been forced from me, by seeing a noble sort of poetry so happily restored by one man, and so grossly copied by almost all the rest. Dryden.

If at any time I speak of light and rays as coloured, or endued with colours, I would be understood to speak not philosophically and properly, but grossly, and according to such conceptions as vulgar people, in seeing all these experiments, would be apt to frame. Newton's Opt.

While it is so difficult to learn the springs and motives of some facts, it is no wonder they should be so grossly misrepresented to the publick by curious inquisitive heads. Swift.

GROSSNESS. n. f. [from gross.]
1. Coarseness; not subtilty; thickness; greatness of parts.

The purpose is periphrastic even as substance, Whole grossness little characters sum up. Shakespeare.

of the vapours which rise and enter into the cells of the brain.
Bacon's Natural History, No. 966.

Then all this earthy grossness quit;
Attir'd with stars we shall for ever sit,
Triumphing over death. Milton.

So this being the first colour which vapours begin to reflect, it ought to be the colour of the finest and most transparent skies, in which vapours are not arrived to that grossness requisite to reflect other colours. Newton's Opt.

For envy'd wit, like Sol eclips'd, was known Th' opposing body's grossness, not its own. Pope.

2. Inelegant fatness; unwieldy corpulence.
Wife men, that be over-fat and fleshy, go to sojourn abroad at the temperate diet of some sober man; and so, by little and little, eat away the grossness that is in them. Afham.

3. Want of refinement; want of delicacy; intellectual coarseness.

I was three or four times in the thought they were not fairies; and yet the guiltiness of my mind drove the grossness of the foppery into a received belief that they were fairies. Shak.

Whatever beauties it may want, 'tis free at least from the grossness of those faults I mentioned. Dryden.

What a grossness is there in the mind of that man, who thinks to reach a lady's heart by wounding her ears! Clarissa.

GROT. n. f. [grotte, French; gratta, Italian.] A cave; a cavern for coolness and pleasure.

In the remotest wood and lonely grot,
Certain to meet that worst of evils, thought. Prior.

GROTESQUE. adj. [grotesque, French; gratto, Italian.]
Distorted figure; unnatural; wildly formed.

The champion head
Of a steep wilderness, whose hairy sides
With thicket overgrown, gratto and wild, Accels deny'd. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iv.

There is yet a lower sort of poetry and painting, which is in a picture: the persons and actions of a farce are all unnatural, and the manners false, that is, inconsistent with the characters of mankind: gratto painting is the just resemblance of this. Dryden's Dufresnoy.

An hideous figure of their foes they drew,
Nor lines, nor looks, nor shades, nor colours true,
And this gratto design expos'd to publick view. Dryden.

Gratto roofs, and stucco floors. Pope's Sat. of Horace.

GROTTO. n. f. [grotte, French; gratta, Italian.] A cavern or cave made for coolness. It is not used properly of a dark horrid cavern.

GRO

This was found at the entry of the gratto in the Peak.
Woodward on Fossils.

GROVE. n. f. [from grave.] A walk covered by trees meeting above.

I look'd toward Birnam, and anon methought
The wood began to move:
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say, a moving grove. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Fortunate fields, and groves, and flow'ry vales;
Thrice happy files! Milton.

Banish'd from courts and love,
Abandon'd truth seeks shelter in the grove. Graville.

Can fierce passions vex his breast,
While every gale is peace, and every grove
Is melody? Thomson's Spring.

To GRO'VE. v. n. [grusle, Mandick, flat on the face. It may perhaps come by gradual corruption from ground feel.]

1. To lie prone; to creep low on the ground.
The steel-head passage wrought,
And through his shoulder pierc'd; wherewith to ground
He groveling fell, all gored in his gushing wound. Fa. 24.

What feel'st thou there? king Henry's diadem,
Inch'd with all the honours of the world!
If so, gaze on, and grovel on thy face,
Until thy head be circled with the fame. Shakespeare Hen. IV.

Now they lie

Upon thy belly groveling thou shalt go. Milt. Par. Left.

Let us then conclude that all painters ought to require this part of excellence: not to do it, is to want courage, and not dare to shew themselves: 'tis to creep and grovel on the ground. Dryden's Dufresnoy.

2. To be mean; to be without dignity or elevation.
I must disclaim what'er he can express;
His groveling sense will show my passion less. Dryden.

Several thoughts may be natural which are low and groveling. Addison's Spectator.

GROUND. n. f. [grund, Saxon; grundi, Danish.]

1. The earth, considered as solid, or as low.
Israel shall go on dry ground through the sea. Ex. xiv. 16.

From the other hill
To their fix'd station, all in bright array,
The cherubim descended, on the ground
Gliding meteorous. Milt. Par. Left.

2. The earth as distinguished from air or water.
I have made man and beast upon the ground. Jer. xxvii. 5.

There was dew upon all the ground. Judg. vi. 40.

It light on him as dew falleth on the ground. 2 Sa. xvii. 12.

Too late young Turnus the delusion found;
Far on the sea, still making from the ground. Dryden's Æn.

3. Land; country.
The water breaks its bounds,
And overflows the level grounds. Hudibras.

4. Region; territory.
With these came they, who from the bord'ring flood
Of old Euphrates to the brook that parts
Egypt from Syrian ground, had general names Of Baalim and Ahtaroht. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. i.

5. Farm; estate; possession.
Uneasy still within these narrow bounds,
Thy next design is on thy neighbours grounds:
His crop invites, to full perfection grown;
Thy own seems thin, because it is thy own. Dryd. Juven.

6. The floor or level of the place.
Wherefore should I fite thee to the ground? 2 Sa. ii. 22.

Dagon was fallen on his face to the ground. 1 Sa. v. 4.

A multitude sit on the ground. Mat. xv. 35.

7. Dregs; lees; faeces; that which settles at the bottom of liquors.

Set by them cyder, verjuice, four drink, or grounds. Mort.

Some insist upon having had particular success in stopping gangrenes, from the use of the grounds of strong beer, mixed up with bread or oatmeal. Sharp's Surgery.

8. The first stratum of paint upon which the figures are afterwards painted.

We see the limner to begin with a rude draught, and the painter to lay his grounds with shadows and darksome colours.
Hakewill on Providence.

When solid bodies, sensible to the feeling and dark, are placed on light and transparent grounds, as, for example, the heavens, the clouds and waters, and every other thing which is in motion, and void of different objects; they ought to be more rough, and more distinguishable, than that with which they are encompassed. Dryden's Dufresnoy.

9. The fundamental substance; that by which the additional or accidental parts are supported.
